

For fairies had broken their promise to ore
Which left iron angry and feeling quite sore

Iron swore to never again
Allow little fairies to sit beside them

Long ago in the ages of lore
The fey made a promise to iron ore

What the promise once was has been lost through the ages
The details forgotten but the feud still rages

"Come near our kind and you shall feel our curse
Poison shall seep from our veins to yours"

So, by the court of the fey a new law was made
That a fairy's vow must always be paid

Have you heard of the fables that say
How iron is poison to fey?

If you want to learn the reasoning why
Just take a peek at whats written inside

FAIRY'S BANE
